MONTREAL, Feb. 5, 1869. Further investigations show that no lives were lost by the St. Patrick's Hall catastrophe. About thirty persons are injured, and many seriously thirty persons are injured, and many seriously. About midnight the company, numbering about 150, were startled by a sharp crack, like a pistol shot, and in a few momenta a second and louder report was heard, when the plaster began to fail. A panic seized the crowd, and a rush was made for the stairs, the most or them making good their escape. The roof was of massive iron, surmounted by the statue of St. Patrick. This calamity is attributed to the hasty manner in which the hall was erected.

A violent snowstorm has prevailed here for the past two days. All the trains are blocked up, and no mails have been received for forty-eight hours. In the neighborhood of Ottawa and Quebec the storm has also been very severe.

OBITUARY.

Marquis Leonel de Moustier. A cable telegram from Paris announces the death in that city yesterday of the Marquis de Moustier, sman was one of the most distinguished public men of France. He belonged to a noble family of the Franche-Comte and was descended from Renaud de Moustier, who accompanied King Philippe Au-gustus in the third crusade and lost his life in 1190 at the slege of St. Jean d'Acre. This family has sent many warriors into the field and in later times has given to France able and distinguished diploma-tists. The ancestor of the late Marquis, the Count and afterwards the Marquis Eléonore François Elle de Moustier, born on the 15th of March, 1751, and deceased the 18th of January, 1817, was successively attache to the Embassy of the Marquis of Clermont d'Amboise at Lisbon in 1775; then at Naples in 1778; Minister of the King at the Court of the Elector of Treves in 1783; to the United States in 1787, and at Berlin in 1790. Louis XVI. offered him the portfolio of Foreign Affairs, but he preferred to be charged with other public duties at the Embassy at Constantinople. The Revolution condemned him to inactivity, proscription and exile. His son, Clément Edouard, born the 2d of January, 1779, and deceased the 5th of January 1830, entered upon public business as Secretary of Legation in Germany, where ne continued from 1800 to 1812. He afterwards became Charge d'Affaires at Dresden and Minister Plenipotentiary at the Court of the Duke of Baden, of the King of Wartemburg, the King of Hanover, and the Swiss Confederation. Elected Deputy for the Department of Doubs in 1824, he was in the interval charged with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs after the retirement of M. de Chateaubriand. Finally he occupied the post of Ambassador to Spain, whence he was recalled at the time of the complications occasioned by Dom Miguel in Portugal.

In Portugal.

Marquis Léonel de Moustier, the subject of this sketch, was the eldest son of Ciement Edouard, and was born during the early part of the present century. In 1849 he became a member of the Legts-lative Assembly, and was distinguished for the zeal with which he espoused all measures of order and moderation. After the re-establishment of the empire under Louis Napoleon he gave an arcent support to the new regime, and in 1853 commenced his diplomatic career by being appointed Minister Plenipocentiary at the Court of Berlin, which had then no ambassador representing France. The skill and tact with which he conducted to a successful Issue the various diplomatic questions which nad arison between his government and that of Prussia gained him the friendship of the Emperor, although he is said to have been quite unpopular in Berlin, probably on account of the firmness with which he upheld the dignity of the French empire as represented by Napoleon, who was then aneered at as a parcent ruler. In 1850 the Marquis was charged with the delicate duty of re-establishing diplomatic relations with Austria, which had been broken off by the war for Italian unity. This task he performed admirably, and, after remaining at Vicana for two years, was, in 1861, appointed to succeed the Marquis de la Vicana for two years, was, in 1861, appointed to succeed the Marquis de la Vicana for two years, was, in 1861, appointed to succeed the Marquis de la Vicana for two years, was, in 1861, appointed to vicana for two years, was, in 1861, appointed to vicana for the Amarquis de la Vicana for two years, was, in 1861, appointed to vicana for the Amarquis de la Vicana for two years, was, in 1861, appointed to vicana for the vicana for the Amarquis de la Vicana for two years, was, in 1861, appointed to vicana for the vicana for the Amarquis de la Vicana for two years, was, in 1861, appointed to succeed the Marquis de la Vicana for two years, was, in 1861, appointed to succeed the Marquis de la Vicana for two years, was a la vicana for Interesting Protestant Episcopal Missionary Meeting at the Academy of Music. The Academy of Music, which on Thursday evening was the scene of the extravagant frivolities and whiri of excitement of the Arion ball, was last evenwhirf of excitement of the Arion ball, was last evening transformed into a place of divine worship, the occasion being a missionary meeting in the interests of the domestic missions of the Protestant Episcopal Church. But although the assemblage of last evening met for a religious purpose, there were those among them who could not help making all the opera house display which the circumstances would permit, and who plumed themselves in the proscenium boxes and ogied the house with lorgneties, as though they were actually taking a birdseye view of the veritable heathen. The house was comfortably filled by a very respectable audience, and the entire stage was occupied by musicians and chorus singers. In fact, the meeting was more of a musical entertainment than a missionary gathering. There was a grand orchestra of about thirty pieces, selected from the Philharmonic Society, with George F. Bristow as conductor. Miss Maris Brainerd, Charlotte Hutchings, George Simpson and J. R. Thomas, vocal soloists, and a chorus of seventy-five voices, made up the remainder of the musical talent and power of the concert.

The exercises were inangurated by the singing of the hymn, "All Hall the Power of Jesus' Name," the andlence joining, after which the creed and prayers were repeated by them. Then followed three selections from the oratorio of "Daniel," viz. —"By the Waters of Babylon" chorus, "O Israel, Return" (aria), and the chorus "On that the Salvation of Israel." was more of a musical entertainment than a mis

Waters of Babylon" chorus, "O Israel, Return" (aria), and the chorus "Oh that the Salvation of Israel."

Rev. W. C. Doans, Bishop elect of the Diocese of Albany, was then introduced and delivered a most eloquent address full of earnest exhoristion in behalf of the mission of Christ, and was listened to with the deepest attention. The address was succeeded by the solos "Then appeared an angel," "Blessed be the name of God," and the chorus "They that trust in the Lord." "From Greenland's ley mountains." was then sung by the audience and choristers, after which Right Rev. Dr. Littlejohn, Bishop of Long Island, made a fervent appeal for support to the cause of domestic missions, and reminded his hearers that there never was a time when the opportunities of the Church to effect much for the spread of the Gospel were so great as at present. He also spoke severely of the fashionable recreations sought at theatres, and claimed that even among the professed church people there were five dollars spent for amusement for every dollar devoted to the canse of Christ. There was more money expended to carry on the war in this country than had been paid for the mission cause of the Christian Church since the Reformation, or during the past three hundred years; and more money was received in small change over the counters of dramshops and liquor salcons in New York and Brooklyn than is paid into the mission societies of this State. Several other selections from the oratorio were rendered and an address made by Right Nev. Bishop Morris, of Oregon and Washington Territory, The hymn "Jerusalem the Golden' was the song and prayer offered by Right Rev. Bishop Potter, of New York.

His Movements Yesterday-Where He Went-

His Future Doings.

General Grant and Mrs. Grant, accompanied by senerals Dent and Badeau, of the President elect's nal staff, remained at the Fifth Avenue Hotel uring yesterday. The spartments occupied by the distinguished party are in a very quiet part of the hotel, and there is nothing about the building which would indicate the presence in it of the President elect, except the "Stars and Stripes" which float over the edifice in his honor.

General Grant kept himself very quiet throughout

General Grant kept himself very quiet throughout the day. Quite a number of persons called to see him, either on matters of business or to pay friendly visits, but only a few were admitted into his rooms, and those were mainly personal friends.

About noon the General entered a carriage and drove down Broadway, for the purpose of transacting some little matters of business. He visited two or three stores and made purchases of various articles. He then proceeded to the establishment of Messrs. Appleton & Co.jand spent some little time in inspecting the different departments. About two o'clock he returned to the hotel and made his way to his apartments without being observed, or at any rate recognized by the loungers around the building, who nevertheiess were on the lookout to catch a glimpse of the "coming man."

Shortly before five o'clock General and Mrs. Grant and Generals Badeau and Dent entered carriages and proceeded to the residence of Mr. Mokean, at No. 445 Second avenue, where a reception was being given. After a short stay at this place the party proceeded to the residence of Mr. Mokean, at No. 456 Second avenue, where a reception was being given. Dinner was served shortly after the arrival of the party, and they did not leave until an advanced hour in the evening. In the morning it was the intention of the General to spend some part of the evening at Pike's Opers House, and a proscenium box was reserved for the use of the party. The arrangement was not, however, carried out, and the persons who had visited the the theater in expectation of seeing General Grant had to go away dis

It is generally understood that General Grant and his party will remain at the fifth Avenue Hotel till they leave town on Monday night, and will not be the guests of ex-Governor Hamilton Fish, as was supposed at the time of their arrival. The programme for the General, so far as dinners are concerned, is now quite full, every night being taken up. To-morrow night the party will be the guests of ex-Governor Hamilton Fish; on Sunday they will be entertained by Mr. A. T. Stewart, and on Monday night Mr. S. B. Chittenden will have the honor of their company at his residence in Brooklyn. The Fresident elect will leave this city on Monday night after the dinner in Brooklyn.

GRANT AND HIS ADM NISTRATION.

The Rumbling of Distant Thunder-"A Cloud

(From the Cincinnati Commercial (semi-radical), Feb. 4.]

Six weeks ago the politicians in Washington who fancied that they were the persons to be consulted by General Grant in regard to Cabinet appointments were fretting because their advice had not been asked and because General Grant appeared to have friends in New York city with whom he made himself at home. There was a little amusement and not a little irritation because when General Grant arrived in Washington, soon after the November election, he caused some bushels of letters addressed to him to be burned without reading. That circumstance, upon the whole, did not look as if the General would be on the most amicable terms with the party hacks and acknowledge infinite obligations to the professional politicians. Now, General Grant is going to New York again, and though his inauguration will take place within a month he has not opened als mouth about his Cabinet, further than to say that he would presently not ask advice, but advise the gentlemen he proposes to call to the heads of departments. It is believe and there is terror in the thought, that he has deliberately taken his pocket slate and ciphered out the Cabinet, for himself. How does he know whether his Cabinet will please the party? Well, perhaps he don't care very much whether the party is pleased. At any rate the wisset of the persons assembled at Washington, and by courtesy called statesmen, shake their heads and say they know nothing about Grant. He was a military necessity, and that's silence."

It will be remembered that the House of Repre-From the Cincinnati Commercial (semi-radical), Feb. 4.] Six weeks ago the politicians in Washington who

It will be remembered that the House of Representatives, some time aro, hurriedly repealed the Tenure of Office bill, and it must have been noticed that the Senate has not done anything of the sort; and it is tolerably apparent that it will not be done. Clearly, in the first place, the Senate would unwillingly, in any case, resign the peculiar power which it has exercised during the war with Andrew Johnson; and certainly it appears there is a disposition, while frant withholds fits confidence from the Senators to hold the Senate in a position to subordinate him. More than that, there is a bill before the Senate, and likely to be passed, formdding a person in the military and navai service holding a person in the military and navai service holding a civil office. The real intent and meaning of the bill is to prevent Graat from making a general Secretary of War and an admiral Secretary of the Navy. This is the more significant because it is no secret that it is Grant's disposition to do just that.

tives of the Central Office, who are now engaged in the unraveling of the mystery. The officials at the Central Office have inaugurated the work by endeavoring to throw more mystery around the case and secure the dreulation of ridiculous statements said to have been made by one of the prisoners. It was circulated about headquarters yesterday that Relly had been communicated with by Captain Young, who was assured that Maher wore for some weeks after his return to the city a coat that he had secured in the country; that the coat becoming worn out he proceeded with Relly to the Five Points Mission House, where he was given a new garment, and then proceeded to a rag store in Baxter street, where he sold it for five cents. The coat he received from the Mission House, it is asserted, he wore up to the time of the murder, and still wears it, and that he has never worn the coat said to be given him by De Lanoy. No mention is made of the hat, however. Relly, it is asked, confirms the statements of Collins in every particular as to the movements of Maher on the morning of the murder after leaving the Spring street station house—viz., that he at once went to the Tombs to lear Justice Dowling define the law. It is safe to say that there is not a word of foundation for this alleged statement of Relly, and that it was circulated for the express purpose of befogging the public and the press.

ASINGULAR DISCOVERY.

When Lowery arrested Maher it was given out that a man named James Relly was also arrested. The blotter of the Fourteenth precinct shows that Relly was takin out of the station house, and this circumstance give rise to the impression that he was arrested. What was done with him is a mystery. It is certain that he is not confirmed in the Fifteenth precinct station house, and it is equally certain that he is not an inhabitant of a cell at headquarters, as represented byodicials about the building. If the truth were known it is probable that he is not a prisoner it is gratan that the officers in solving the mystery. Th

The fact the Maher was never seen about the spring street station house wearing a white overcoat and the declaration of deceased that his murderer handedsuch a garment to his confederate before inflicting he wounds are points used in the prisoner's favor; but the prosecution claim that they will be able to show that on the morning of the murder a coat of this description was will be able to show that on the morning of the murder a coat of this description was stolen in the Bowery. The officers, it is said, are endeavoring b discover by whom this coat was stolen. Their supposition, which may be erroneous, is that a man who would commit robbery and murder would shal a coat, and that on the way from the Fourteenth precinct he appropriated it, and after the murder made away with it, lest it should assist in his identification.

has not beel fully advised of the progress of the inquirs, but hopes are expressed that to-day or Monday it will be ready for Mr. Garvin and the evidence at does given to the Grand Jury.

The proceedings in the habeas corpus case in favor of James Lotan No. 2 have been adjourned until Monday.

John Collies, one of Maher's frienda, 'again lodged at the Fourseenth precinct last night. At halfpast three tils morning, with a view of eliciting further particulars, an interview was had with him. Collies insists that after the return of Maher to the city, early in December he wore a tlack jacket and cap until after New Years, when he attained a coas at No. 4 waverly place. He ferther declared that it eight o'clock on the morning of the murder he saw Maher and Reilly in the Tombs police courts. If the alleged statements of Reilly were really made, he and Collins do not agree as to Maher's movements.

A NEW THROUT.

It is now reported that while Mr. Rogers resided on Staten Island he was instrumental in effecting the arrest and conviction of some burglars, and that one of them declared that when he regained his liberty he would certainly kill him. Some of the officers engaged in the case are of the opinion that the murder was committed by one of these men, whose object was revenge as well as robbery.

OLYMPIC THEATER.—"Humpty Dumpty," having ritnessed the rise and fall of the sensational dram pearan tragedy and comedy, is prepared to hold his own with the new claimants for public favor, and will, in all probability, flourish at the cosey Olympic for generations to come. The pale faced "Humpty" is just as mischievous and just as fea-tive and jolly as ever, and the hilarious sport, though new, is just as mirth-provoking as when the capricious fellow first started upon his metropolitan rambles. The new edition of the pan-forming abounds in clawer local hits is prolife with omline abounds in clever local hits, is replete with ew tricks and scenery and is hailed with the laugh new tricks and scenery and is halled with the laugh of approval from large andiences every evening. All the leading characters in the piece remain unchanged; but many new faces have been added in the minor parts, oesides the introduction of many comical novelues, not the least of which is a ballet in long dresses and a ballet in very short dresses; but the two extremes do not meet upon the stage at the same time. This second volume of "Humpty Dumpty," though bound in calf, is "bound to please" the public, and will, doubtless, enjoy as large a circulation as its predecessor. There is, however, altogether too much ballet in the piece, which cannot but be benefited by an immediate curtailment of its short skirted figurants.

BALLS LAST NIGHT.

Waiters' Protective Association.
The sixth annual ball of this association came off t evening at Irving Hall, and proved to be one of the most agreeable reunions which this association has ever held, and certainly one of the best arranged and satisfactory balls that have been held at this during the present season. The room very neatly decorated, and the comy, which was very large, was such as dispel at once any idea of restraint ings of approaching dawn, loud and long, were oft repeated. The members of the association showed that they were quite expert in handing around the "ducks." The officers of the association—Measn. Johnson, McDermott, Scott, McMahou, Nash and O'Brien—together with the door manager, Mr. Kennedy, and his committee, arranged and conducted the festivities in such a meaning of the conducted the festivities in such a meaning of the conducted the setting of the conducted the conducted the conducted the setting of the conducted the conduc O'Brien—together with the floor manager, Mr. Kennedy, and his committee, arranged and conducted the festivities in such a manner as to warrant the assurance that everybody present must have enjoyed himself most heartily. If there were no hearts fricasseed, out up into fragments and cooked it was not because there were no tender hearts present and no sweet smiles and bright eyes to do the cutting and the cooking. Then again the members showed themselves quite efficient in serving "toasts" at the refreshment board, and when the well known strains of "Home, Sweet Home" were given by the band, if there were no "soles" well done it was only because their owners had not gone through the lengthy and comprehensive menu which the hosts had provided for the occasion.

Young Men's Friendly Association. lation gave its fifth annual ball, and as the orders of dancing were headed "A friendly welcome to all," it must be said that all who were present certainly experienced a friendly welcome.
